

The morning of March 11, 1946, I opened my back door to find sleet and snow—over a bucket on each step and all around. During the night, I thought we were to get a slow rain. To my surprise, it was not rain. It slowly melted + continued to drip off the house till almost noon. We had very odd weather this whole winter.