

I remember back in the twenties Grandpa & Grandma Fountain lived in Ray City - after Uncle Leo married Aunt Clara - they always lived together - we as children like to go out back of their house was an old barn - I liked Fred Cushman & she always would give some when we went - The old barn was covered with the Cushman rivers - they run everywhere. The large Cushmans all over the barn they had a garden by the old barn - you could see the Cushman the Cushman - Grandma died in 1932 - she had a stroke & then got buried trying to fry fish at Aunt Essie - Aunt Essie & Aunt Julia lived side by side on Tatnell Street in Levensworth. Grandpa & Grandma went to stay with Aunt Julia - Aunt Julia went to the hospital to have Betty so Grandpa went over to Aunt Essie to look after the children so to speak & Aunt Julia's two small children - So Aunt Essie decided she would go to the hospital & left Grandma with all the children - it was getting late so Grandma tried to fry the fish - She was some time after her stroke, Uncle Pollard had a second-hand furniture store in their back yard also had trucks to move things for people - they all lived upstairs some season also lived on the bottom - The house was built side by side you could almost reach out the windows & touch the house next to you. Uncle Pollard had a good business - He would bring money for mama to keep for them until he got enough to buy Ray mill pond & later he & Aunt Essie separated & he & his lady friend moved to Ray Pond. They had married & Grandpa had the pond in his possession for years before that - Grandpa then went & ground meat & gets Uncle Pollard didn't know or was busy fishing & selling fish - After Uncle Leo died of blood poison Grandpa later came & lived with us - He would sometimes visit his other children for a short time - of course he was real glad Uncle Pollard bought the pond back.

Grandpa was a type person the grass was green just over the way

Miss Anna was a Thompson from Jid-dun, Ga. He father left her a lot of property & money - Grandpa run through with it
