

Nedra and I are delighted to be among family and friends, and thank you for coming to share this special day with us.

Will's mother and I could not be more proud of the person that he has become. We have watched him develop and we embraced his love of learning, his reliability, and his clarity of purpose. These traits led to his ability to serve others. Above all, however, we are grateful that he is a responsible caring father for our grandchildren, Christine and Harrison. These children get the love and support that every child deserves.

When Christy came into Will's life, she brought him joy that I had not seen in him before. As a mature, responsible woman, she came on equal terms with her own record of success. Nedra and I noticed her warmth and adaptability immediately, and so began a life-long relationship.

Today, Will and Christy have joined together to go henceforth as a couple. Together, Will and Christy will be stronger than either was alone. Every day, they will give priority to the preservation of this union because of the importance it has to each of them, and to Christine and Harrison.

The times ahead will be filled with good times and bad times. When you encounter bad times, pause and fall in love again.

Please toast the union of our son and new daughter.
